MCS gets good marks for response to pandemic

'Return to School' plan in development

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Results from a Madison Consolidated Schools survey showed that parents, students and faculty felt the corporation did an excellent job adjusting to the COVID-19 pandemic that shut down classes in mid-March.

A total of 539 people participated in the survey, which was sent out by the district in early May. Those individuals contributed 748 individual "thoughts" and left 12,020 star ratings on other thoughts.

Madison Schools Communication Director Ashley Schutte shared results of the survey at the

Southwestern schools work toward plan for reopening

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Southwestern School Board approved several personnel and budget decisions as well as looked ahead toward a possible reopening plan for the fall when it met on Monday.

Superintendent Jeff Bates said the school system does not yet have a plan in place for the fall, but thanks to guidelines provided by the Indiana Department of Education and the Indiana State Department of Health, a plan should be in place by next month's meeting.

"The guidelines they issued are 38 pages long and I'm in the pro-

Mayor Courtney: Overall project completion still three to four months away

BY MARK CAMPBELL

An announcement on Wednesday that the new U.S. 421 bridge access route — the Project 421 Madison Gateway — will be opened to traffic as early as Monday morning was premature.

According to Madison Mayor Bob Courtney, Project Manager Kyle Beaty of Beaty Construction Inc., updated the city Friday that the road now won't be ready for traffic until Thursday, June 18.

Speaking at Wednesday's Stellar Executive Team Meeting at City Hall, Courtney said the overall project is still some three to four months from completion but both the contractor and the Indiana Department of Transportation had said the new access road from Harrison Street coming off the

HYDROPLANE RACING SERIES

Bayfair decision means no H1 racing in 2020

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

The 2020 H1 Unlimited Hydroplane Series officially came to an end Tuesday with a unanimous decision by the San Diego Bayfair Board of Governors to cancel this year's event due to concerns over the COVID-19 pandemic.

All five scheduled races on this year's schedule have either been postponed or canceled outright. Only the Tri-Cities Water Follies in the state of Washington has held out hope of possibly rescheduling its traditional late-July event to later in the year, but that seems unlikely.

"We're disappointed that San Diego Bayfair won't take place this year," said Bob Davies, race director for San Diego Bayfair held annually on Mission Bay

Indiana COVID-19 recovery now in Stage 4

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Gov. Eric Holcomb on Wednesday moved up the next stage of his Back on Track in Indiana reopening plan to Stage 4, allowing movie theaters, bars, museums, amusement parks and playgrounds across the state to begin reopening yesterday with casinos to follow on Monday.

The new state order will allow social gatherings of up to 250 people and retail stores and malls to operate at full capacity, Holcomb said. Gatherings have been limited to 100 people and stores to 75% capacity for the past three weeks in a gradual lifting of a statewide shutdown that began in early May.

The most recent COVID-19 pandemic update by the Indiana State Department of Health showed Indiana with an additional 16 coronavirus deaths — some actually dating back to May 9, but just reported Friday — and 452 new positive cases. That brings the state's total to 39,146 Hoosiers infected with 2,214 total deaths. The state processed 7,392 new tests and has now tested 335,180 overall.

Jefferson County, which canceled its now twice monthly COVID-19 emergency briefing on Friday, has recorded 52 positive cases and one death out of 1,539 residents tested. Although some of those infected are still active cases, most of the cases are people who have recovered and been released to

County Council approves another $40,000 to house juvenile inmates

BY COLLIN OVERTON

Members of Jefferson County Council granted Circuit Court an additional $40,000 to cover costs to house juvenile inmates at a regular meeting Tuesday night.

Circuit Judge DJ Mote brought the issue before County Council on May 14, explaining that his department was $14,465 over budget due to the cost of housing three delinquents at the Dickinson Juvenile Justice Center in Johnson County. The juveniles had proven too disruptive to house at less expensive, rehab-oriented facilities like the Southwest Indiana Regional Youth Village, Mote said at the time.

Two of the juveniles have since been released, but one is still detained in Johnson County, Mote said. The fees from the detention center and other costs of running Circuit Court have put his department over budget by more than $14,000, but Mote said he was "confident" a $40,000 appropriation would see the department through the rest of 2020.

Pieratt to lead Marching Cubs and band program

BY SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

Madison Consolidated Schools has named Layn Pieratt, a Jennings graduate who already has ties to Madison, to head up the Marching Cubs and serve as high school band director.

Layn Pieratt

Pieratt, who is already familiar with Madison as the music director at First Christian Church the last five years, is a graduate of Jennings County High School and holds a Bachelor of Arts degree in Music Education from the University of Indianapolis and a Master of Science degree in Design and Production from Indiana University.

"I am thrilled to be at Madison," said Pieratt. "I have been involved as the music director at the First Christian Church for the last five years so I am very familiar with Madison. I deeply appreciate the commitment to and value of the arts and music culture in the community."

Pieratt comes to the Madison program with a strong background in marching music as well as music education. She spent time with the Drum Corps International world class finalist Blue Stars Drum and Bugle Corps from 2009-2013, touring as a trumpet player, mellophone player, drum major and administrative staff member.

Following her undergraduate work, Pieratt went back to Jennings County where she taught music education in grades kindergarten through 12. She was also the assistant band director where she directed rehearsals, designed competitive marching shows, conducted and managed the theatrical musical pit orchestra, taught AP Music Theory classes, and was hands on teaching students of all ages technical music skills.

As a member of both her high school and college marching bands, Pieratt appreciates and embraces the many traditions and realizes each band has their own unique things.

"I want to first learn about and understand the traditions of the program from both the student and parent perspectives," Pieratt said. "Together, we will work together to determine what is working, identify things we may consider moving away from in order to introduce new things — my primary goal is to work with everyone to ensure a smooth transition."

Pieratt is anxious to get started but will wait until COVID-19 reopening plans are finalized.

"We hope to be a part of the graduation ceremony in July and host a band camp," she said. "But with the changes taking place all over the state, I will wait for guidance from the district so that we proceed with safety at the forefront of our efforts."

INMATES

The juvenile was originally sent to Southwest Indiana Youth Village, but has since been moved at least twice for being aggressive with peers and staff. After weeks of rejected offers from other youth centers in the region, Mote said the Wernle Youth and Family Treatment Center has offered to take him when a spot opens in July or August.

Council members also reviewed an update by Sheriff Dave Thomas on inmates and bills from facilities out of county. The Jefferson County Jail is currently housing 109 inmates in-house and 50 more in other county jails as of June 1, "the highest amount we've had out," Council President Pam Crozier said. Thomas was not present.

The sheriff's office has been able to avoid overcrowding in the jail since the COVID-19 pandemic started, but that's come with higher costs. The bill for housing inmates in Crawford County totaled $37,065 in the month of May alone.

Council member Heather Foy was glad to see the lower in-house count, but questioned how much longer the county can could continue to "bleed this out" and continue paying $37-$40 a day per inmate. County Council has already granted the sheriff's department an extra $500,000 to cover housing inmates out-of-county this year, council member Judy Smith noted.

Crozier said the county will continue looking for a "happy medium" where the in-house population can remain under the 109-bed capacity and bills are still getting paid.

County Commission President Dave Bramer also provided an update that Jefferson County has been allocated $1,044,949 from the CARES Act in response to the COVID-19 emergency. Bramer said it might be a good idea to consult with an attorney on how those funds can be used should Jefferson County see another COVID-19 spike this summer or fall.

A couple of attorneys have already given pitches, Bramer said, and things like personal protective equipment for county employees would hopefully be eligible.

Emergency Management Agency Director Troy Morgan later mentioned that a lot of the CARES funding came from cutting state grants like the Indiana Department of Homeland Security's salary reimbursement program, which has paid up to 50% of salaries for the director, deputy director and administrative assistant in county EMA departments.

That amount in 2021 would now be capped based on population, meaning counties with less people would get less funding regardless of the situation. Jefferson County EMA would be short $8,000 to $9,000 of its usual budget if the state's plan for 2021 were to go through, Morgan said.

Morgan said he was unsure if the proposed cuts will be implemented, but EMA departments around the state and various organizations are voicing their opposition.

"Of course the EMA Alliance of Indiana, the State Association and various EMA agencies are all up in arms writing letters and I don't know if that will change or be rescinded," Morgan said.

cess of color-coding it to determine what we should be doing, what we will be doing and what we just can't do," Bates said. "By the July board meeting we should be able to present our opening of school plan."

The next school board meeting was scheduled for July 27, but Bates requested that the meeting be moved up two weeks in order to give parents plenty of time to digest the plan before the opening of school in early August. A date of July 13 was agreed upon by the board.

Among the issues Bates said the school is looking into is the possibility of adding e-learning days to the schedule, much like what Madison Consolidated Schools has done recently, as well as possibly providing bottled water to students or allowing students to bring their own water. Under the DOE/ISDH guidelines, all water fountains in all schools will be turned off.

"We plan on having discussions about e-learning, especially if this COVID comes back in the fall or winter like some people have said," Bates said. "It's on our radar."

In addition to the school-opening plan, the board approved 15 personnel items from resignations and retirements to employments, contract extensions and transfers. The board also approved the food services contract, a bid for new carpeting in the middle school, the replacement of two doors at the high school/middle school and the high school/middle school handbook. The board also approved payment of $500 to teachers who taught dual credit, PLTW or AP classes this past school year.

RESPONSE

monthly school board meeting on Wednesday.

"We knew that we were well-prepared for what happened and the survey shows that," Schutte said. "But this survey gave us a better understanding of what we need to do and some things that we can look at in the future. But overall, we were very pleased."

The survey showed that 90% of participants felt like they were either fully supported by their teachers or supported to a degree compared to just 10% who said that they were not supported. In terms of tech support, 22% said that they got help while just 3% said they received no help and 75% didn't need help at all. A total of 96% said they either had full or limited internet access with just 4% indicating they did not.

Schutte said virtually all of the individual responses were positive with most parents and students stating that they felt the school corporation did the best that it could under difficult circumstances.

"There were no 'eye-poppers', nothing that was unexpected," Schutte said of the responses. "Most of the themes centered around social emotional support and more face-to-face meetings with teachers. We'll be looking into platforms that will allow us to do that better."

Schutte also addressed the schools' efforts in making sure students were fed. A total of 36,000 meals were distributed throughout the school district and school resource officers reached out to several students by delivering meals personally in order to check up on at-risk students.

Superintendent of Schools Jeff Studebaker said that he was happy with the way teachers, parents and students responded to the unusual situation, but he also said that participation in school assignments could have been better.

"All four of our elementary schools had at least 80% of students complete all assignments with Lydia Middleton the highest at 89%. However, the upper levels tapered off the older they got," Studebaker said. "But I thought that the schools and teachers showed an extreme amount of grace and forgiveness on assignments as kids worked through this difficult situation."

Meanwhile, Studebaker said the school system is working on a "Return to School" plan he hopes to have for the board by the July meeting. He thinks the state will require schools to complete the full 180 days of the school year with no exceptions but that school will start on time, in some fashion at least, in August.

"We're still not sure how (the plan) will look and the details are being hammered out. But whatever plan we have, it will be a solid plan based on science, not politics," Studebaker said. "It will be a plan that is fair to all of our students and it will be a plan that is flexible. We've heard from several parents that have said that they are not comfortable sending their kids back to school just yet and we fully understand that. There will be a component that will allow students, no matter where they are from, to attend virtually."

"We were thrust into a situation that nobody ever expects to be in and I was very impressed with how well everybody pulled things together," Board president Rob Kring said. "Everybody should be proud of the way they handled this."

BOARD HEARS UPDATES ON PROJECTS

The COVID-19 pandemic may have thrown traditional schooling for a loop, but a myriad of special projects have progressed nicely.

Kevin Yancey, director of facilities and special projects for the district, updated the board on several projects currently underway at nearly every facility.

The renovation of the auditorium at the high school is nearly complete with new dressing rooms and a back stage area already built. The gym at the high school has received a new floor to go along with other upgrades that were done last year and the swimming pool at the junior high has been refurbished.

The Motz Group, which is overseeing construction of the new FieldTurf surface at the high school football field, is also nearly done with foundation work.

"You should be able to see green on that field in a couple of weeks," Yancey said. "The field should be ready for when football starts in August."

All district buildings have receive roof repairs and are being fitted with solar panels. Panel installation is almost complete at the junior high and other buildings are set to have their panels installed.

"The kids should be really proud of the work that we have put into nearly every facility," Yancey said.

RECOVERY

resume normal activity. Switzerland County has 22 confirmed cases out of 318 tests and no deaths; however, the other Indiana counties that border Jefferson — Clark, Scott, Jennings and Ripley — have each posted more than 100 cases and multiple deaths.

Meanwhile, Kentucky now has 11,945 confirmed COVID-19 cases with 493 deaths and 3,379 recovered. That includes 16 confirmed cases in Carroll County and five in Trimble with no deaths reported in the two counties immediately across the Ohio River from Jefferson.

As most of the Indiana moves forward with Holcomb's reopening plan, there are areas that are taking a more cautious approach including Indianapolis where Marion County has 19,492 total cases and 643 deaths.

Indianapolis Mayor Joe Hogsett said the state's largest city would delay lifting more coronavirus restrictions on businesses until June 19 to give businesses more time to make needed preparations.

Elsewhere in Indiana, restaurants will be allowed 75% capacity in their dining rooms, while bars, nightclubs, movie theaters, bowling alleys, museums and amusement parks can open at half capacity. Casinos can resume operations starting Monday under safety plans submitted to the Indiana Gaming Commission.

Public playgrounds were allowed to reopen Friday, but festivals and parades ares still prohibited.

For most people, COVID-19 causes mild or moderate symptoms, such as fever and cough that clear up in two to three weeks. For some, especially older adults and people with existing health problems, it can cause more severe illness, including pneumonia, and death.

Dr. Kristina Box, the state health commissioner, warned that precautions were still needed to stem the coronavirus spread even as most of the business and travel restrictions first imposed in March are lifted.

"It doesn't really mean that we go back to the normal — no masks, no social distancing, no careful handwashing, alcoholing your hands," Box said. "All of those are critical."

Holcomb said he was still targeting July 4 as the date for when most gathering size and activity restrictions will be eliminated.

Holcomb first declared a public health emergency for the state on March 6 and followed that with a statewide stay-at-home order closing nonessential businesses beginning March 25. The stay-at-home order was lifted on May 4 as the initial easing of restrictions began.

"We can't let up," Holcomb said of safety precautions. "We can't act like this virus isn't continuing to spread across the state of Indiana, but we have the intensity at a managed level."

COURTHOUSE TO REOPEN MONDAY

The Jefferson County Courthouse will reopen to the public on Monday but Superior and Circuit courts will operate by appointment only.

Visitors are asked to bring inside only what is needed to conduct business and leave bags and purses in their vehicles. Visitors are also encouraged to wear a mask.

Some offices will be using Plexiglas shields and serve visitors at their doorways. Hand sanitizer will be available at different locations throughout the building. Those who have been ill, running a fever or have been around someone showing coronavirus symptoms, are asked to please consider another time to visit the courthouse.

BRIDGE

Milton-Madison Bridge to Main Street was ready to accept traffic. As it turned out the pavement is ready but enough side work, wall work and striping remain that the contractor will need until later next week to be ready for traffic by working this weekend.

Workers completed paving on the new section of roadway this week but still have several projects to finish before opening it to traffic. Courtney said Beaty Construction Inc. expects to finish that work and have the road ready for a June 18 opening.

Although next week's opening will mark only a partial completion of the overall project, Courtney thinks the significance warrants celebration.

"I think it's worth celebrating the opening of the new road," Courtney said.

A ribbon cutting will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday with Ginny Welch — wife of former Mayor Damon Welch, who secured the project during his administration but died unexpectedly last summer before seeing it completed — and her family given the honor of making the first trip over the new road.

The ceremony will take place just north of the intersection of Harrison and East Second streets and Courtney and former mayors Tim Armstrong and Al Huntington, and Congressman Greg Pence will give remarks before following the Welch family in the second vehicle over the new roadway.

Beaty Construction is continuing operations in the area to complete pedestrian bridge construction, water main, curb and gutter work, storm water placement and sidewalk construction.

Traffic will be impacted or continue to be impacted in several areas next week, including:

- Baltimore Street will be closed north and south of Main Street
- St. Michael's Avenue will be closed south of Main Street with local traffic only via East Street and Second Street
- A barrier wall will be installed across Second Street to close the road between Clay and Harrison streets for water main work
- Fillmore Street will remain closed for pedestrian bridge construction
- First Street will remain closed for drive, curb and gutter work
- Neither the Hillside Inn nor Roosevelt Street will be accessible from Main Street until end of construction

Motorists are reminded to slow down, use extra caution and drive distraction-free through all work zones.

The project is scheduled to wrap up in either late September or early October at which time INDOT will transfer control — and maintenance — of State Road 56 through downtown Madison to the top of Hanover Hill as part of the overall agreement to land what will end up being about a $15.1 million investment.

The San Diego race has traditionally been the final event of the season for both the H1 Unlimited series and the Grand Prix series. Neither of those series have run an event this season as one-by-one organizers have canceled races due to the virus epidemic and related crowd restrictions.

Despite other cancellations, the annual Vintage Thunder hydroplane event in Madison is still scheduled to be held. The event, which is set for Sept. 17-18 on the Ohio River, will be free to the public.

Learning to say no

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: With your advice, I hope my family will be able to deal with a problem. Our 45-year-old daughter is at the heart of the issue. "Jane" has had a challenging past. She is an intelligent and motivated person, but starting in high school, she began a difficult life (mostly to do with her poor choices in relationships).

She had a son at age 19, got married and then divorced soon after. She floundered for five years or so. After several relationships, she found another man. In those few years, she gave up custody of her first child, left a full-time job and followed her new man to another country (for a job that didn't work out). Then she returned to the States, did everything she could to get pregnant again, and succeeded. Shortly thereafter, the relationship ended.

With our help, Jane relocated to another (smaller) city 150 miles from us. Briefly, she held a good job and was managing well in raising her second son. After three years, she was let go from her job. In the interim, she managed to live on welfare. Four years ago, she announced her intention of returning to college to get her teaching degree. We knew that she'd never be able to work long enough to repay her loans, but we were encouraging and supported her decision.

Now the present problem. In the past five years, my wife and I have "spotted" her money, to keep her afloat — approximately $12,000.

Much of it went toward leased automobiles, but there has been more — $100 and $500 here and there for "incidentals." Fortunately, she will graduate in June. But her student loan funds, which she was using to help pay rent and groceries, have ceased. Her usual summer job is uncertain. But most troubling of all, due to the coronavirus, her prospects of a teaching job in her area are also uncertain. She gets by month to month. Last summer, she asked us for funds to help her lease her (new) car. We gave her $4,700. This goes on and on.

Last year, my wife and I retired. And without raiding our savings we cannot afford to support her anymore. June is approaching, and so is the fall. I am anticipating Jane will appear with another request for funds. My wife doesn't handle confrontations well, and much of our giving has been motivated either by avoidance or guilt. Besides just saying no, is there any other answer? — Jane's Father

Dear Jane's Father: Tough love is tough to give. But you and your wife are doing your daughter no favors in the long-term. If you keep acting as her financial crutch, she'll be leaning on you forever. That's not just immoral; it's also unsustainable. Deplete your retirement savings, she'll still be asking for more when there's nothing left to give. And you'll be in dire straits right alongside her.

"Just saying no" is easier said than done; I know. It will be a hard conversation. Your daughter is not going to like it. But do not for one second accept any guilt she tries to lay at your feet. You've done nothing to earn that.

Reconnecting during quarantine

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: My siblings and I were never close. In fact, my brother and I could have been considered "mortal enemies" as we grew up. Since our mother passed nine years ago, there has been little to no contact.

In the past few years since I retired, I have come to realize that a lot of the circumstances surrounding our upbringing did not encourage family unity. I feel like I've gone through the stages of grieving as this realization has set in. I also realize that, with one brother deceased and a sister very ill, my brother, the former "mortal enemy," and I are the only ones from our generation who are still healthy.

I have wondered what can be done to bring us together, and have to tell you that circumstances surrounding COVID-19 have opened the door. We all live in different states now, and I have taken it upon myself to check in with family members, including nieces and nephews, on a weekly basis, asking how everyone is. I collect the responses, email my brother with their updates, and ask for his updates. He responds!

When it's time to contact the others, I let them know what is going on with him. I don't know where this will lead between my brother and I, but I feel encouraged. He is even talking about visiting and offers my daughter advice about the future. This is all new, and we are both proceeding very carefully, but there is hope. As difficult as it was to take that first step, I'm writing to encourage others to do it. Choose your words carefully and be brief to start, but start! — Sigh of Relief

Dear Sign of Relief: Wow, just wow! You took a difficult time, with COVID-19, and turned it into a time for you and your brother to heal a strained relationship. You took this pandemic as an opportunity to open your heart and reach out to your brother.

That is to be applauded and encouraged. Thank you for sharing your letter, and I am hopeful that it motivates other people to do the same. Family — whether it is the one we are born into or the one we choose — is everything. And although members of that family can be challenging or difficult, they are still, in the end, a part of us.

Dear Annie: My husband's disabled cousin lives with us. I wouldn't mind except he smokes cigarettes in his bedroom, which is essentially a mother-in-law space. The smell of smoke seeps out into the front yard, where I like to garden. I have asthma, and it makes me cough, so I have to leave, but more, it enrages me. He has several serious health issues, and his doctors have pleaded with him to stop smoking. He has tried many times but never succeeds for long.

When I look at him, I don't see a person most of the time; I see a walking cigarette. I grew up in a house blue with cigarette smoke, and my mother, and first mother-in-law, both died of lung cancer. My husband finally gave me an ultimatum that I'm no longer allowed to complain about this. I spend so much time angry. I can't afford a therapist. Is there a group to whom I can vent? — Up in Smoke

Dear Up in Smoke: I'm not really what ultimatum your husband gave you, but it clearly is not working. You have asthma, and it is your house. You have every right to request that your husband's cousin smoke elsewhere or that something is done to reduce the effect of the smoke. However, being angry isn't going to help him quit.
